Prenatal Coverage

Prenatal Coverage

PRC may cover prenatal care in the following situations:

- For the unborn biological child of a PRC-eligible member
- Non-Tribal member who is pregnant with a Tribal child

Contact the PRC office as soon as possible to begin the registration process for prenatal coverage. Coverage for the expecting mother does not begin until an application is submitted with all required documents and the application has been approved. If the mother is uninsured or underinsured, the family may be required to apply for Medicaid through their state. We have Tribal Assisters that can assist with this process by appointment.

Newborn Coverage

If the mother has already been approved for the PRC program: Labor and delivery costs for both mother and baby may be covered
Note: Some exclusions may apply

Next Steps After Baby's Arrival

1. Notify PRC within 3 days of birth of the new baby.
2. Registration documents for the newborn will be sent and must be returned within 30 days of the baby's birth.
3. Contact Tribal Enrollment to notify them of your child's birth.
4. Contact Primary Insurance or your employer to add coverage for your baby as most insurance policies only cover newborns for the first 21 days.

Important Reminders

- PRC is a payer of last resort
- All other insurance coverage must be used first
- This is a brief overview. Additional documentation may be required depending on your situation.
